A yearbook serves more than one purpose. The first one that we see is that it shows in pictures and words the events of the college year. But more than this, it is something to keep and look over again and again in the years to come. Within these covers is a record of a year of your lives. You can see pictures of your old schoolmates and what they did. It is a preserver of activities and memories.

To preserve these memories is the task of a yearbook staff. Our photographer has been rushing about like mad for a year to get pictures of you eating hot dogs, booing basketball referees, and looking at the birdie in your Sunday best. And the rest of the staff has been rushing a little, too. Red Schmitt has been turning out his delicious nonsense by the ream, and we have all been trying to beat schedule deadlines by a gnat's eyelash. You are here on the pages of your book.

It's been a lot of work to get this book ready, but it's been a lot of fun, too. We have had our share of troubles, to be sure, but they have been offset by the splendid cooperation we have received from the administration and student body. You have all taken an interest in our work, and somehow it makes everything seem worthwhile.

President's Message

Dear Friends:

In 1827 Shurtleff College was founded by John Mason Peck, a man who had rightfully earned the title "The Pioneer." The three-month trip from Litchfield, Connecticut to St. Louis in a covered wagon, tested his endurance, his courage, and his faith. He came to Illinois to establish not only churches, but an institution of higher learning "embracing the general courses of instruction for all students in the ordinary or higher branches of theology, science and literature."

In more than a century the hardships to which this pioneer leader was exposed have been overcome. Through an industrialized society a trip from Litchfield to St. Louis today may be made within a few hours, in comfort and luxury. We should not overlook the fact, however, that in the industrialization of society other problems have been created which today require the same pioneering spirit which characterized the journey of John Mason Peck.

More recently we have devoted so much of our energies to the manufacture of motors that we have neglected our emphasis upon the development of man. No one would wish to eliminate our motors, but pioneering territory today lies in the realm of the spirit.

Your challenge and mine is in reducing the chasm which has been created in our modern world through over-emphasizing the machine and neglecting our emphasis upon human values. There is no justification for the neglect of any of these areas of progress. Our responsibility for tomorrow lies in the incorporation in our living, of mechanical progress, spiritual development, and social adjustment.

—David Andrew Weaver

Dedication

DON P. HAWKINS

Dr. Hawkins came to our campus in August of 1946, as head of the Journalism Department, and professor in English. In addition to these duties, he has been the faculty advisor to the school paper, and up to this year the yearbook as well. His competence, knowledge and experience in the journalism field has been a great aid and a source of inspiration to students working on these publications. He is an outstanding speaker; his classes are never dull, and his fame as a lecturer has spread far and wide. He is tireless in his efforts to help Shurtleff to grow. He is a personal friend to every student. He is never too busy to talk to one of his students about his problems, and to help him in any and every way in which he can. To this man is this book humbly dedicated.

Acknowledgement

HARRY E. JACOBSON

Mr. Jacobson is our new yearbook sponsor, in addition to holding the position of business manager of our college. He has been extremely cooperative and tolerant of our ignorance and incompetence. Through his constructive effort many things have taken form in this book that would otherwise have remained unsaid and undone. A problem taken to him ceases to be a problem, and another page of the book has been born. There is a great deal of business and financial activity involved in putting out a yearbook, as well as all of the other trials and tribulations. He has risen to every occasion, and came out with flying colors. We make sincere acknowledgement of his help and cooperation.

SHURTLEFF - ROLLA

SHURTLEFF - FERRIS INSTITUTE

Shurtleff trailed in first quarter 7-0. They got rolling and scored three touchdowns before the half ended—scored twice in second half. Principia scored in waning minutes—final score 34-13 Shurtleff.

Record — 16 Won; 8 Lost
Conference Co-Titlists

All Conference

While sharing first place honors with Eureka for the conference title, our Pioneers placed two men on the select All-Conference squad—Ralph Miller and Sherrill Hanks.

Ralph Miller known for his high scoring and stellar floor game has made the All-Conference team three years in a row. He has one semester of eligibility left so we will see plenty of him again in the fall.

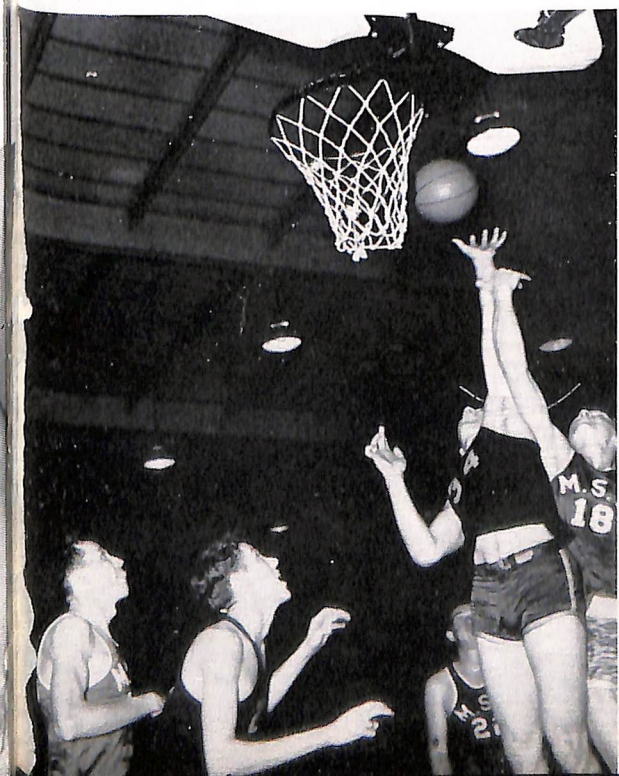

Although Sherrill Hanks has played his last game for Shurtleff he will long be remembered for his all around well balanced game. While making his share of points he also played a good floor game.

B Squad

Also sharing honors with their big brothers are Coach Merle Pearce's "B" squad. Playing a very rugged schedule, Coach Pearce's men turned in 12 victories and 5 defeats. Their only losses were incurred to St. Louis University twice, Washington University once (split), the Y.M.C.A. Bombers and Wright Leather Co. of St. Louis. Much credit should be given these boys not only for this year's performance but for their future potentialities as they no doubt will have varsity berths in the future.

THE NEW WORLD OF METALS

Bronze and its first cousin, brass, went into the service of human progress when man's only home was a cave. Today the whole world benefits from the countless new products of American industry . . . products in which brass is playing a major role in the fields of electronics, transportation, communication, personal and household conveniences.

Being man-made, the usefulness of brass and all other copper-base alloys is limited only by the skill, resourcefulness and research that go into their making. At Western Brass Mills, sheets, strips, long coils and drawn and fabricated parts of these metals are made with the exactitude of a pharmacist filling a prescription. Where special temper, ductility, rigidity or finish is required, Western delivers metal as specified . . . tailor-made to the individual requirement.

Contribution To Your Protection, Comfort and Well-Being

New uses for Western metals turn up day by day. As each evolves, special problems must be met. For, while all products seek to change and improve the shape of everyday living, none can successfully deny the basic laws of chemistry and metallurgy. These laws guide us in the making of every pound of Western metal. We sell not mere metal, but the opportunity for manufacturers to reduce production costs, increase the serviceability and all 'round value of their products.

It is Western's old-time habit of keeping abreast of all that is new that makes all of the other divisions of Olin Industries so proud of their mutual partnership with progress.
